November 1, 2021

Dear Mayor Derwin & City Council Members,

The San Mateo County Jobs for Youth program would like to express our deepest gratitude for the amazing work you have done for our community. We know firsthand that these past few years have been difficult and feel even more inspired to make an impact. We envision a community in which every youth feels empowered to take charge of their career and economic future. To this end, we provide support via our three pillars of success—job skills workshops, employment opportunities, and scholarships.

We have been empowering the underserved youth in Portola Valley for many years. With the incredible support of the teachers in the Sequoia Union High School District, we are able to inspire the next generation to achieve their higher education dreams. So far, we have awarded twenty-three scholarships to youth in the Sequoia Union High School District to help them succeed on their journey of higher education.

Our founder, Al Teglia believed that all youth should have the ability and access to higher education regardless of socioeconomic status or hardship. As we carry on his legacy, we are humbled to be celebrating our 40th Anniversary! Thank you for your continuous support of our program, as none of this would be possible without you. Wishing you and your families a joyful holiday season.

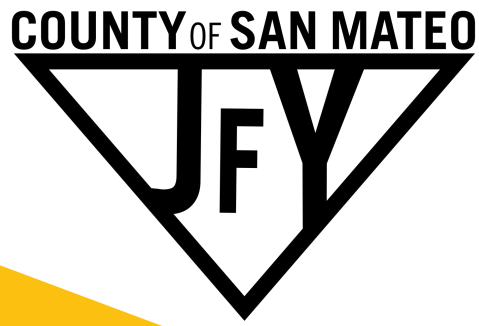

With Gratitude,

Jordy Pascual, Co-Manager

Dear Mayor Derwin and Council Members,

I'm writing to call your attention to the many housing solutions in Sustainable San Mateo County's new Indicators Report and SSMC's call for nominations for its annual Sustainability Awards and Green Building Award, which are due December 6.

We hope you will share this info with residents in your city's newsletter.

The Indicators Report includes 30 proven solutions for expanding affordable and equitable housing, as well as a thorough analysis of the housing shortage in San Mateo County (one reason: nearly 11 times more jobs than housing units were created between 2010 and 2019) and how we got here. It gives high marks to the state and county for making affordable housing a priority and offers case studies and tips on how some local leaders are moving the needle.

Hear what experts said at the Indicators Launch event

We hope you'll consider submitting a nomination by December 6 for a Sustainability Award or our Green Building Award on our website here. Nominations can be made for Sustainability Awards in five categories: individuals, nonprofits, businesses, education institutions and government agencies, including cities. In addition, we are accepting nominations for our 20th annual Green Building Award, which we cosponsor with the American Institute of Architects San Mateo County Chapter.

Peninsula Clean Energy is accepting nominations until November 17 for its 2022 All-Electric Leadership Awards, which recognize builders, property owners and design teams on the forefront of building electrification in San Mateo County. Details are here.

2021 Indicators Report Focuses on Solutions to Housing Crisis

Housing experts at the recent online launch of Sustainable San Mateo County's 25th annual Indicators Report said political leadership, funding and aggressive use of land are needed to solve the county's ongoing housing shortage.

The Indicators Report Launch on Zoom featured three experts who are working on creating affordable and equitable housing for everyone: Rick Bonilla, Deputy Mayor, San Mateo; Diana Reddy, Council Member, Redwood City; and Matt Franklin, Chief Executive, MidPen Housing.

The full Indicators Report, as well as an executive summary, a brochure and a video of the Indicators Report Launch event, can be accessed at tinyurl.com/2021SSMCIR.

Among the key findings of the report are:

- Between 2010 and 2019, nearly 11 times more jobs were created than housing units. Sustainable San Mateo County determined that 330 developments currently under consideration in the county would create more than four times more jobs than housing units in the pipeline.
- In order to afford an average two-bedroom housing unit in San Mateo County, renters need to earn about $51 per hour, more than three times the county's minimum wage, which is $15.62 per hour.
- A large segment of the population cannot qualify for affordable housing because they don't earn enough money. There are very few spots available for people earning 30 percent of the Area Median Income (below $38,400 for a household of one, below $54,800 for a household of four), who are designated as extremely low income.
- Many extremely low-income people in the county are one medical crisis or paycheck away from homelessness. It's important to help them stay housed. If just 6 percent of the extremely low-income individuals in the county lose their homes, the county's homeless population (1,500 in 2019) will nearly double.

Among the positive forces the report found that are beginning to address the housing problem are the California Comeback Plan, which is the largest investment in housing in state history; the state's Homekey Program, which transitions hotels into housing for homeless individuals; funds that San Mateo County is devoting to housing from Measure K, the half-cent sales tax that supports essential county services; and new state legislation that makes it possible for homeowners to add more units on single-family lots.

The report includes 30 proven solutions for expanding affordable and equitable housing, including insisting that affordable housing is part of every new commercial project; trading public land, such as city parking lots, for affordable housing; working with corporations, school districts and others to create housing for local employees, teachers and disabled individuals; trading housing credits with other cities; and protecting renters with “option to buy” arrangements, speedy legal help when they face eviction and relocation benefits.

About the Indicators Report

Each year, Sustainable San Mateo County’s Indicators Report does in-depth research on one aspect of sustainability performance in the county. This year’s report on Equitable Housing includes comprehensive data, the historical context, driving forces, an analysis of the impact of climate change on housing, case studies and recommended solutions and policy initiatives for San Mateo County.
