

Time to sow wildflower seeds

Now is the perfect time to sow wildflower seed for a beautiful display of native wildflower diversity in your own yard. Best to sow before January, these early rains have given germination a good start.

Loosen the soil a bit before sowing and tamp down after. A good initial sprinkling will help them settle in place. Keep the area weed free and moist (not wet) if we don't get rain for a few weeks.

Below find photos of just a few of our local native wildflowers that are available by seed.

Baby Blue Eyes, Nemophila menziesii
Copyright © Catherine Magill

Globe lily, Calochortus albus
Copyright © Catherine Magill

Farewell-to-Spring, Clarkia amoena
Copyright © Catherine Magill

Purple Chinese houses, Collinsia heterophylla
Copyright © Catherine Magill

Blue-eyed grass, Sisyrinchium bellum
Copyright © Catherine Magill

California Poppy, Eschscholzia californica
Copyright © Catherine Magill